HE old fashioned garden was glowing with radiance and delicate perfume. A hush passed over the colorful scene. The beautifully matured poppies which had burst into bloom gracefully swayed on their slender stems and spoke in their own language of strange happenings. The lovely Parma Violets, which seemed to quiver with happiness, laughed softly because they knew the secret; one glance at the pert Black-Eyed Susans showed that mischief was afoot.

Later in the evening when the trees on the edge of the garden were swaying in a warm southerly breeze and the birds were collecting themselves in the time-worn branches, one small Violet raised her soft little face and demanded audience. She announced that she had received word that a great number of her own little sisters were coming to spend the next four years in the garden, and she was depending upon the Violets as they would be timid at first. She stopped speaking and a hush fell over the scene.

The Violet in her own way had foretold the planting of the seed of the class of nineteen hundred thirty-two, which, though green and modest at first, was destined to grow and blossom into a beautiful flower quite worthy of its home.

A year had passed and again the flowers were in assembly. The Red Poppies had gone and in their dignified places the Violets were smiling. The Black-Eyed Susans had lost some of their pertness and were beginning to appear love sick. In one corner could be seen tiny signs of growth and self assertion. This time a large Violet acted as speaker and said that her sisters were pleased with the little flower beginners who had distinguished themselves as conquerors of studies, home sickness and even of the bold Black-Eyed Susans. Miss Violet concluded by ordaining the young plants as full-fledged Sophomores.

Through the following year the little shoots began to assert themselves more and more and became quite annoying to their fellow flowers, especially to a bed of seed recently planted.

At the third conference of the flowers the absence of the Violets was deeply felt; however their fragrance still hovered over the quaint scene. The Black-Eyed Susans who were trying their best to fill the vacancy made by the Violets, were the speakers and told of the ability of their followers in strange games and of their untiring zeal in ushering at assemblies and above all of their lavish entertainments.

Another year passed by and the once green seeds no longer needed a caretaker. Beautiful rosebuds had grown up from the seeds and were unfolding their petals. In remembrance of their once coquettish youth they danced and sang around the fire. The flames lit up the crimson petals as they assumed their crowning glory—their caps and gowns. How stately they had grown! They were the queens of the whole garden. Kind and gracious was their rule, characterized by many responsibilities as well as privileges.

Full grown Roses must not remain always in a garden, but they must be plucked and sent out into the world where they may extend the joy of their heings to others. With many fond adieus to the garden and the other flowers the brilliant Roses departed one lovely May morning.

Even to-day the Roses, when the sunshine sparkles on the dew of the gardens, like to shut their eyes and think that their caresses still linger on the ivy they planted and that their fragrance still lingers to the bough of the once small tree that they kissed and left as a token of their love. They hope that here and there a shattered petal remains as a pledge of their devotion and loyalty to the Garden of Salem.

Class Poem

*Like the flowers we represent
All our hues and colors blent;
Sway we and bend in a peaceful breeze,
Leaving a fragrance for memories!*

*Quaint our garden, sweet and serene
Brightly it glows, a quiet scene;
Dainty flowers amid age-old trees,
Leaving a fragrance for memories.*

A Past-Future Tense

NCE upon a time—1932 will do for a date—there was a ghastly depression. Admirable upstanding men went crooked to keep from going broke; business slumped; and the gold standard got tarnished. Even the tiresomely optimistic weather prophet turned pessimist, and editorial comment was enormous. Finally after all the forests had been smashed into woodpulp, and all the woodpulp had been rolled out into newspaper, and all the newspaper had been used two or three times, a Congressman was inspired to introduce a bill about it. For a year and a day he thought or looked as though he thought, and then he rose from his Congressional seat and gave to America and to the civilized world the Somersault Bill. This historical document suggested a remedy for the paper shortage; namely, the abolishment of all manufacture of newspapers, books, and calendars, and the re-use of all old ones. "It is said," declared Representative Bullonandon in the memorable address with which he introduced the bill, "that history repeats itself. Why not? You have heard 'Turn backward, turn backward, O Time in your flight' ever since you were old enough to realize that the clever man is finding all the time that the stupid fellow is losing. For the sake of Economy, Novelty, and the Democratic Party, let us turn time backward!"

The Somersault Bill became law, and consequently the year after 1931 Anno Domini became 1930 Anno Domini Dua.

Tempus fugit-ed backward swiftly and uneventfully. Folks living in this past-future had come to think of it as past perfect, but it was dull even in these backsliding times to be able to predict just what the news of the next day would be and to be forced to read a forty-year-old paper at the breakfast table.

Then came a leap year—1890 A.D.D. Folks began to be forward even in backward days, and some bolshevic named Graves printed a newspaper that contained new news and leap year wisecracks and clever advertisements. The reading public, having read stale news from second-hand newspapers for over forty years, went wild over a fresh newspaper—an audacious thrust at the irreproachable Somersault Bill—a scandal sheet printed on cellophane. Small wonder the public went wild—Read for yourself!

BANK ROBBERY!

Willis, Leader of Crime Ring, Suspected of Safe Breaking

E. Creuse, for 38 years night watchman for the Cash-'Em-If-You-Can Bank, of which the wise old grey-headed V. Langley is president, was shot through the left funnybone at approximately midnight on the last night in May by a masked bandit. Creuse showed admirable courage in her refusal to "stick 'em up!" and although she was unable to avert the catastrophe, when she is well enough to receive visitors the president, Miss Langley, will call to thank the faithful soul for invaluable service.

Private Detective Preston states that the masked bandit could have been none other than E. Willis, the vicious gangster, whose whirlwind tactics have made her a difficult problem for the police.

COOKE, ARCHEOLOGIST

Had Unearthed Original Ten Commandments

Nell Cooke, the archeologist whose fame has spread over the entire globe in the last twenty years, had dug up the original stone slab bearing the Ten Commandments. She is being sued as disturber of the public mind by that wealthy lover of leisure, Martha Thomas. Miss Thomas states that she is willing to throw the bulk of her fortune, which she recently acquired in Wall Street speculation, into an attempt to break these Ten Commandments.

SUICIDE!

Corinne Jones Hangs Self By Bonnet-Strings!

A year ago Miss Corinne Jones joined the Salvation Army, because the hard blue poke bonnet was excessively becoming to her. (We aren't being unfair. She said that in her diary. We sneaked and read it one day.) Her rejected Parisian suitor, who sets all the styles, has put the old Eugenie style off on the Salvation Army just for spite and malice, and just see what he has done! The Brute!

SOCIETY

Lady De Got-Rich-Quick-and- Lost-It-Quicker Has Young Son

Lady Got-Rich-Quick-and-Lost-It-Quicker, the charming wife of Lord Got-Rich-Quick-and-Lost-It-Quicker, self-made lord of creation, having recently returned to her moldy o'd castle on the Thames, was delighted to interview our reporter, and seized upon this, the first chance offered her, to get her new name into print.

It will be of interest to friends and relatives of this prominent couple (and to all others who are expected to give presents) to learn that formal announcements have been mailed announcing the birth of a son, Archibald Alowishus III.

Lady Got-Rich-Quick-and-Lost-It-Quicker was formerly Miss Beatrice Hyde, the famous beauty from Buchannon.

Fisher-Blark Nuptials To Take Place For Second Time

You are among those, of course, who have followed with morbid fascination the romantic lives of Winifred Fisher and Clair Blark—else why would you be reading this brief notice of the brilliant affair which you are planning to attend tonight? There was a marriage—rumor has it—some 40 years ago. There was certainly a divorce and complete separation year before last; and now there is to be another marriage. Love is like that, you say, so what can you do? Why, go to the wedding, Stupid, and predict that they will live happily ever afterwards.

Athletic Gossip

It is being rumored around that Shorty Biles is teaching dry-land swimming. We wonder whether or not the accomplished pupils realize that fish out of water are usually suckers.

Hazel Bradford inherited a fortune from the oldest relative she had in the South, and she donated a gymnasium, just as a matter of principle, to the oldest college she knew of in the South. This is a short remark, but its significance to Salem goes on forever.

'Tis said that Ann Meister quarrels with her husband, the Big League Baseball Pitcher, but we can't be sure of anything except the fact that Ann is the mascot of the team, the sponsor of the dances, and the tot of every party.

Blackburn French Kinder- garden To Be Discontinued

Miss Margaret Cynthia Blackburn announces the formal closing out of her French kindergarden. This institution is, at the present time, not more than 24 hours old, and as it might seem strange to the uninitiate that its closing follows so closely upon its opening, I am quoting Miss Blackburn in regard to the matter:

"I'm announcing to you that I'm through. I've done the best I kin do. So I'll stroke my flat purse. Give each child to his nurse. For I've taught the brats all that I knew."

Hutcheson Reports Favorable

The many friends of the celebrated circus tight-rope walker, Miss Maude Hutcheson, who was injured here last Thursday evening when she fell from a rope stretched across the top of the tent, a distance of 200 or more feet, to the sawdust ring below, will be delighted to hear that this terrific blow almost succeeded in knocking back into Miss Hutcheson's head the senses that were knocked out by a milder fall in early youth.

FRIENDLY FRANNY

(EDITED BY F. CALDWELL)

Dear Kind, Friendly Franny:

I feel as though you are the one person on earth who can understand me—you know, I mean, really understand. You invite me to come to you with my most trivial and intimate problems; I will, darling Franny. But there is something I must tell you first, Franny. I am in love with a boy, well, I might as well tell you. It's a boy, a boy named W. W. (like Woodrow Wilson, you know). He has been very sweet to me, dear Franny, but the other night, Saturday night, he . . . he . . . Well, he, he . . . told me a dirty joke! What MUST I do?

Frantically yours,

MARY VIRGINIA PENDERGRAPH.

My Dear Child: When you are forty or thereabouts, there is just one thing to do about a dirty joke and that is—LAUGH!

WHO'S WHO

D. Litz, the world-famed auctioneer, is at present in the Sudan selling tom-toms to the natives.

Beulah Zachary's senatorial voice now has a Leagual tone. Zachary is head of the Secretariat of the League of Nations and is now resident in Geneva.

P. Holderness, the globe-trotter, whose docile husband is playing follow-the-leader with her around the world, has just released an interesting newsreel which she took on her last visit to the Cannibal Islands. You won't want to miss this graphic presentation of cannibalistic interpretation of the age-old fad of dieting.

M. M. Norman, the Democratic Party Boss, has proved invaluable since her election because of her left-handed methods and right-handed brains. Unusual combination!

In view of the fact that she is the teacher of 85 children and the mother of 5, it seems particularly appropriate that Mrs. Mary Alice Beaman Married-Teacher has been selected president of the National Parent-Teacher Association.

Remember Floyd Gibbons, some thirty or forty years ago? Well, we have a new one and a better—Josephine Blanton.

Edith Fulp—who prefers to be known merely as Fulp—has been doing an excellent piece of work on the County Homes and Orphan Asylums. She has talked reform to the church, the school, the home, and the office. As a reformer, however, she may need a little reforming herself.

Miss Pratt is a dear, original little creature. She has written a musical comedy centered around an individual little ditty entitled, "I Love You—(With Variation)." Delightfully new. You owe it to yourself to attend.

BOOK REVIEW

Miss Julia Meares has written a book. It isn't a very good book; I wouldn't advise you to read it or even to try to read it. Miss Meares is a very nice authoress, but her works are very poor. I haven't read the book myself, consequently I won't attempt to tell you anything further about it except that I would advise you not to read it. If I can remember the name of her work before we go to press, I will not do anything about it, but it may give me some satisfaction to remember, even as it does when I write such a delightful critical review as this.

LOOKING for YOUTH ?

ABRAHAM LINCOLN'S mother died at the age of 37—an old woman, worn out from the hardships of the frontier. She was not an isolated case. There were thousands of others like her.

Hard, physical labor robbed her of health and beauty—made her old before her time.

Strange as it may seem, even in this electrical age, there are countless homes where, except for lighting, the work is being done just as it was in the frontier days. The women of the house are still wasting their health and time doing tasks that electricity can do for them at a very small cost.

Electricity will do your washing and ironing with a minimum of effort on your part; it can help with the cooking and cleaning. There is hardly a household task that it cannot make easier, or do for you.

Electricity is Now the Burden Bearer Put It to Work For You!
